

REMOTE WORKING

Benefits for businesses and employees

Get your infrastructure ready for remote workers

Over the last decade or so remote working has gained popularity in the UK. Researchers state that it creates a dynamic and empowered workforce who, in turn, are more productive. The government's recent flexible working directive is likely to further increase the number of remote workers in the coming years.

However, not all companies are set up for secure and effective remote working; those that aren't leave themselves open to risks such as loss of productivity, data loss and security breaches.

OGL has a number of technologies at its disposal that can be deployed to allow secure, reliable access to emails, applications, files and even your whole desktop from anywhere – simply using an internet-enabled device and a good internet connection.

Ensuring information is readily accessible to enable teams to collaborate and share content when they need to, requires far more than the traditional tools of email and telephone.

At a glance

-  Connect your workforce, regardless of location
-  Build a modern, flexible work environment
-  Reduce office space by enabling remote working
-  Maximise productivity from your employees
-  Delivered by IT experts

A range of options for all budgets and business types

At OGL we like to gain a proper understanding of the make-up of your business and its workforce. We like to spend time with you at your business seeing how things tick. Only then can our IT Consultants be sure they are designing the best IT solution for your needs.

To achieve remote working we'll discuss the pros and cons of Hosted Desktops versus a Virtual Private Network (VPN) and recommend the options that will best suit your requirements and preferences.

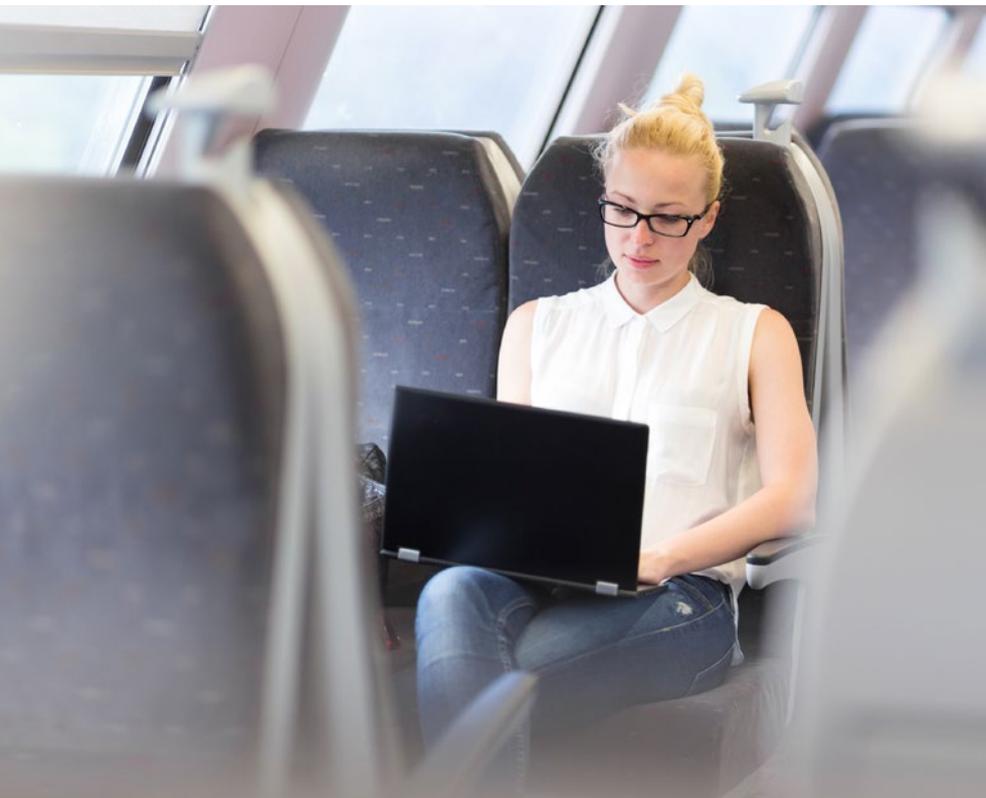

Some smaller companies may even find that Microsoft's Office 365 package will give them all the functionality they need to work remotely. Again, once we have a full understanding of your needs, we'll advise you accordingly of the most cost effective solution.

Don't just take our word for it...

“ OGL's cloud IT services have enabled us to maximise the productivity of our vital home-based workforce, whilst ensuring our IT costs are predictable and manageable. ”
